

What has happened to America, we no longer have the freedom of choice and innovation. The local broadcasters should applaud satellite stations for creating a new way of getting information and music to the people. Now it's up to the broadcasters to come out with something even better than what the XM's and Sirius people have done. Don't stifle technology, but encourage it. This is/was the American way. It's what has made us a great place to live. If you don't think this is true, look around you and see how many different countries have moved to America because they want to be a part of what we have.
